

Kimberly C. McKeirnan, PharmD, BCACP (email: Kimberly.mckeirnan@wsu.edu)

Kimberly McKeirnan is a tenured Professor of Pharmacotherapy at Washington State University College of Pharmacy and Pharmaceutical Sciences, where she has served in progressive academic and leadership roles since 2013. She earned her Doctor of Pharmacy degree from Washington State University in 2008 and is currently a PhD candidate at Nelson Mandela University in Gqeberha, South Africa. She is also a board-certified ambulatory care specialist and holds a professional certificate in Pharmacoepidemiology and Pharmacovigilance from the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine.

Professor Kimberly McKeirnan is an internationally recognized pharmacy educator and researcher dedicated to advancing patient care through innovative pharmacy practice models. Her work focuses on immunization delivery, mental health training, pharmacy education, and improving healthcare access in rural and underserved communities. With extensive experience in teaching, research, and global collaboration, she has authored more than 100 peer-reviewed publications and book chapters and has secured millions in grant funding to support projects that enhance public health and pharmacy education.

She is an active leader in professional organizations, serving on advisory and editorial boards, and has received local, regional, and national honors, including the American Association of Colleges of Pharmacy Emerging Teaching Scholar Award and the American Pharmacists Association Immunization Champion Award. Passionate about mentorship, she has guided fellows and students through research and academic development, shaping the next generation of pharmacy professionals.